Cürex Names William F. Cruger to its Board of Directors

NEW YORK, NY September 16, 2014 – The Cürex Group announced today that William F. Cruger has joined its Board of Directors.

Mr. Cruger has a more than 30-year career providing a broad range of strategic advice to companies in the financial services sector. Through 2013, he served as a Vice Chairman of JP Morgan and Co.'s global Investment Banking Group. From 1996 through 2011, Mr. Cruger served as a Managing Director in JP Morgan's Financial Institutions Group and previously ran JP Morgan's investment banking practices in Japan, Latin America and Emerging Asia. Bill Cruger currently serves on the Board of Directors of Virtu Financial and MarketAxess Holdings and has previously served on the Board of Directors of Archipelago, Credittrade and Capital IQ. He has an M.B.A. from Columbia University and a B.A. from Clark University.

Commenting on Mr. Cruger's appointment, Jamie Singleton, Cürex Group Chairman and Chief Executive Officer said, "We're very excited to have Bill join our Board. The breadth of his experience advising companies on all matters of strategy, financing and M&A will add a valuable perspective to the management of our business and to our Board of Directors. Bill has an outstanding reputation and his decision to join the Cürex Group Board is an important endorsement for our Company."

Mr. Cruger added, "This is an exciting time in the foreign exchange markets and Cürex is providing a unique set of solutions to foreign exchange market participants. Cürex's global relationships and product set reflect a deep commitment on the part of the Company to technology-driven solutions that directly address significant challenges in the FX markets. I look forward to working with Cürex's management team and Board of Directors to build upon its successes in the FX space."
