NEW YORK, NY – November 14, 2016 – The Cürex Group announced today that Justin Brill has joined its ranks as Managing Director. He will focus on business development at this New York, NY-based institutional foreign exchange execution services and data analytics company.

Mr. Brill has spent the last 12 years at Morgan Stanley where he most recently was Executive Director for Listed Derivatives & OTC Clearing. Prior to that promotion, Brill was the Global Head of FX and Metals Prime Brokerage. He holds a Bachelor of Science degree from Boston College.

Commenting on Mr. Brill's hire, Jamie Singleton, Cürex Group Chairman and Chief Executive Officer said, "Justin's decision to join Cürex speaks volumes about the relevance of our FX ECN platform and data analytics capabilities, as well as their unique benefits to every buy side customer. Justin is the latest, important addition to our business development efforts. As he introduces his relationships to our platform, the Cürex message and value to the FX market will be extended and expanded. Our organization is thrilled to have Justin on board as a valued team member and FX market specialist."

Mr. Brill added, "I am very excited to join the Cürex team. The FX marketplace continues to change and respond to regulatory and economic influences. Cürex has built an impressive and accessible set of tools that benefit every buy side user of FX. I chose to join Cürex at this time to help them convey their message and real benefits to a broader slice of the FX user universe. Over the last six years, I have watched Cürex develop into a relevant, value-added execution platform for the buy side. My objective is to assist them accelerate their market penetration and further grow their expanding customer base."
